

Interest Groups

Name: _____

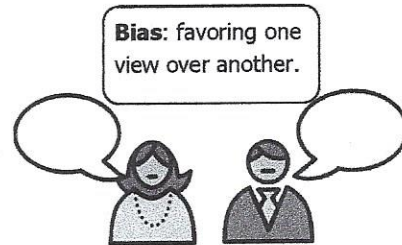

Influencing Government

Interest groups use several strategies to influence government. The amount of influence that interest groups have on government is a major issue of concern for many people today. At the same time, millions of citizens rely on interest groups to make their voices heard.

Lobbying for Support

Interest groups hire lobbyists to meet with members of the government and discuss the group's issues and concerns. Lobbyists say that their job is to provide information to decision makers. The information lobbyists provide has been carefully chosen to persuade the audience to take one side of an issue. Lawmakers have to be aware of the bias in the lobbyists' messages and consider both sides before they make any decision.

"K Street" is commonly used to describe lobbyists in Washington, DC. Many of the major lobbying groups have offices on this street.

Endorsing Candidates

During elections, some interest groups may endorse, or officially support, candidates. Groups choose a candidate to support based on what the candidate has done in the past and where the candidate stands on issues important to the group. Once the candidate is in office, he or she may introduce new bills, support existing laws, or use influence on important committees. In return, the interest group encourages its members to vote for that person in the next election. In addition, the interest group may donate money to the candidate's election campaign.

Raising Money

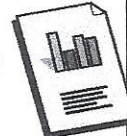

Interest groups raise money to support their efforts to influence the government. This creates the concern that interest groups can "buy" candidates by contributing lots of money to the candidate's election campaign. Once in office, such a candidate might be more concerned about pleasing the interest group than representing the voters. Because of this, there are strict rules about how interest groups may collect and donate money to political campaigns. Those that do must form a political action committee (PAC) that follows strict government rules about giving money to political candidates.

Not everyone agrees about what kinds of rules interest groups should have to follow. Some people fear that campaign financing laws limit the ability of people to support the causes they care about. Others fear that interest groups have grown to have more influence on government than the public at large. They believe the groups should be controlled. The debate continues as some interest groups and wealthy individuals who support them find loopholes, or ways around, the campaign finance laws.

iCIVICS

Strategies for Influencing Government:

Inform the public and elected officials about issues that matter to the group.

Donate money to political campaigns in exchange for support by the candidate.

Endorse a candidate running for office and suggest that the group's members vote for him or her.

Reading p.3

Influencing Government

Directions: Fill in the blanks from the article on page 21.

Interest groups use several _____ to influence the _____. The amount of influence that interest groups have on _____ is a major issue of _____ for many people today. At the same time, millions of _____ rely on interest groups to make their voices _____.

Lobbying for Support

Interest groups _____ lobbyists to _____ with members of the _____ and discuss the groups _____ and _____. Lobbyists say that their job is to provide _____ to decision makers. The information that lobbyists provide has been carefully _____ to persuade the audience to take _____ side of the _____. Lawmakers have been aware of the _____ in the lobbyist's message and consider both _____ before they make any _____.

Endorsing Candidates

During _____, some interest groups may _____, or officially support, _____. Groups choose a _____ to support based on what the candidate has _____ in the past and where the candidate stands on _____ important to the group. Once the candidate is in _____, he or she may _____ new _____, support existing laws or use influence on important _____. In return, the interest group encourages its members to _____ for that person in the next _____. In addition, the interest group may donate _____ to the candidate's election campaign.

Raising Money

Interest groups raise _____ to support their efforts to influence the government. This creates the _____ that interest groups can _____ candidates by _____ lots of money to the candidate's _____ campaign. Once in _____, such a candidate might be more _____ about _____ the interest group than representing the _____. Because of this, there are strict _____ about how interest groups may _____ and donate _____ to political campaigns. Those that do must form a _____ that follows strict government rules about _____ money to _____ candidates. Not everyone _____ about what kinds of rules that _____ should have to follow. Some people _____ that campaign _____ laws limit the _____ of people to support the _____ they care about. Others fear that interest groups have _____ to have more _____ on government than the _____ at large. They believe the groups should be _____. The debate continues as some interest groups and _____ individuals who support them find _____, or ways around the campaign financing

_____.

Answer the following questions about the article you just read.

1. Do you believe that interest groups are good for our democracy? If so, explain in a few sentences the benefits that interest groups can have for you and me?
2. What might be one disadvantage of interest groups on our democracy?
3. As you know from the last unit, the rule of law is an important principle in our society. Therefore, the government feels that laws around who can donate to campaigns and how much, is an important issue. Therefore, there are rules in place so that powerful people can't buy our elections. Do you agree with this? If so, why? If not, tell me why not?